On Saturday we all met at Little Hartley at 9:00 and then headed off down to Jenolan Caves, had a brief stop there for a toilet break. Back in the car for the trip to Boyd River campsite, set up the tents and had a sandwich for lunch. At 1:00 drove to the Kanangra Walls walking trails.

We walked the Water Falls track down a lot of stairs and came to a beautiful waterfall and creek. While we were trying to get closer to the waterfall to take some good shots Glen had a bit of a disaster with his camera as it fell in some water.

We spent a little while looking at the waterfall and then we had to make the walk back up the stairs to the top.

We all had to have a rest at the top before we went on the plateau walk which was supposed to be a easy walk and no more stairs. The first bit had a few stairs and then we took a detour to have a look at the dance floor in a cave.

Then to the plateau which was a good level walk and we stopped on a rock ledge and sat for sometime taking in the spectacular view of where we had just come from. We had some lollies, a cold drink, took some photo's and just enjoyed the rest before we had to walk back again

When we walked back to the main track Paul discovered a brown snake just before Glen backed into it as the snake was basking in the sun near the path. Back to the campsite and we organised the fire for the night and our dinner, a good night had by all; Ian had to have a short sleep by the fire before he got a second wind.

Next morning we packed up camp and Kelly & Greg (visitors) left us and made their way home. We headed off on the Morong Creek trail which was nice and easy for quite awhile. We went through a few water crossings which was great.

We all stopped at Dingo Dell for a cup of tea and a pit stop, continued on to Mt Werong camping area for lunch. When we got back on the track again we went to check if Limeburner's track was open, on the way we saw a black snake and nearly got wiped out by on-coming vehicle.

Found Limeburner's track but it was closed so we had to turn back and find another track.

Arrived at Wombeyan caves had a ice cream and a chat before we set off home through Wolondilly and Mittagong.
A terrific weekend had by all and thanks to Pam and Jack for organising the trip.
