

Trip report

Kings & Tablelands

Sunday 3 May 2015

Trip Participants

Glen & Kim Coddington – trip leader	Colorado
Michael Kingswell	Jeep
Ivor Nichols	Pajero
Chris Marsden	Feroza

We all met up at the McDonalds at Blaxland. Everyone was nice and early. We gathered around for a quick chat about the trip before our last toilet break was had and we headed off up the highway. We continued to Wentworth Falls where we turned off towards McMahons lookout. The weather was pretty horrible with rain and thick fog. At this point we didn't even think we would bother with the lookout but as we travelled further down the track, it seemed that the rain was easing and the fog getting lighter. We stopped at Battleship Rock for a walk around. Unfortunately due to vandalism and a car being burnt out in the cave some time ago, the aboriginal art work was no longer. However the shape of the rock was pretty awesome. Back into the cars and we continued down to the carpark at the lookout. The fog had actually cleared! So we started the 800m walk down hill to the lookout which was spectacular. The fog was still rising out of the valley in sections and the sun was trying to make an appearance which made the lookout even better. After photos and a chat we headed back up the hill to our cars where we had morning tea and big drink of water after the walk back!

From here we backtracked and turned off to Ingar Falls picnic area. The falls were beautiful, particularly after the rain we had. Here we had lunch, sat around and talked some more before heading off home. It was a great day meeting new people.

