We kicked the day off with an early start at the Lolly Bug cafe. Coffees (or mochas) for all and a little trip planning before Brett led the convoy towards Jenolan caves. After a brief stop we trekked up the mountain and spotted a scavenger hunt afoot.

Our first official stop was at Kanangara Walls for morning tea and we soaked up the view on a beautiful and clear day. We were greeted some friendly wildlife, snapped some pictures and continued onwards towards the Dingo Dell campsite for a quiet lunch. To access the area Marianne made her first water crossing with ease!

We journeyed through some wonderful scenery and landscapes and before we knew it we were at the windy Wombeyan caves setting up for the night. We said farewell to Marian and Margaret and we were left with just Brett, Peter, Scott, Gabby and I to get the campsite ready. We enjoyed happy hour snacks and attempted to stoke a hot fire in the steel fire-pits with minimum ventilation.

Dinner and drinks were short lived due to the subpar fire and before we knew it we were cooped up in swags ready to hit the hay.

The following morning was a beautiful sun filled day in the campsite and after a bidgee barbie cooked bacon and eggs we all went our separate ways back home to finish off the weekend.

Thanks to Brett for running a great weekend.
