We met at the Jenolan Caves café (poor coffee though) and after a bit of a wait, we made our way up to the Kanangra Walls turnoff to airdown. After the trip briefing we made our way down to the Kowmung Firetrail where we got stuck behind a standard Commodore who insisted on travelling down without letting us past (despite asking them politely)

From there we dropped down to the Kowmung River Crossing before crossing over and heading into Dingo Dell for morning tea and a quick pitstop. We then made our way back up the climb and turned off towards Kanangra Walls for our lunch stop.

After a nice lunch break everyone did the scenic walks, some out to the walls, others then down to the dancefloor and some game energetic members heading all the way out to the plateau.

As everyone wandered back (some out of breath) we ended the trip and one by one people aired up and made their way back out through Jenolan Caves and towards home.

We were the last ones out and got hit with some traffic that saw us take 3.5hrs home from the Caves.

Despite the traffic, the day, the trip and the company were all fantastic. Thanks to everyone who made the trip such an enjoyable day
