We all met at the usual meeting spot at Lithgow (McDonalds). Some of us had a quick bite to eat with a not so quick coffee due to them being flat out as always. We had a little group chat about the day ahead and were all on the road ready for our drive. We headed off towards Capertee where we turned off. After some hills climbs and descents, we had a very early morning toea at the Diggings camp ground where some of us made good use of the toilet. From here we continued on the track, conquering some big hills indeed. Everyone was doing great. The track was a little loose in some sections but overall a very fun track. Then we came across what I think is known as Jack Ass Hill (or something very similar) Not everyone was sure that they wanted to drive this hill. Glen went down first about half the way and waited for the others to walk down. After a bit of a discussion, it was decided not to do the hill, some people didn't think they had enough clearance to get through it. Glen turned around and drove back up and we all went around the long way.

We eventually made it out and aired up for the drive home.
